If you or someone you know can identify with any of these statements, you or they may be the victims of human trafficking. In such cases, United States law declares that you have been a victim and are not at fault (Trafficking Victims Reauthorization Protection Act of 2012). Please consider speaking with an adult to arrange for your protection or that of someone you know. Cooperation with law enforcement may save the life of you and/or your family members or friends.

Statistics show that children who run away from abusive homes are very likely to be contacted by a trafficker within 24-48 hours, and they will not come across as someone whom you will suspect. Before running away from an abusive situation, please get help in finding a safe place. Call: 1-800-96-ABUSE.
